Fola Adeleke

Limited edition fine-art prints for walls that people live with.

TWENTY-NINE WORKS

WHY THESE WALLS

Art that recognises the people in the room.

Fola Adeleke makes work about identity, culture and emotional memory: the modern African woman, lovers who are best friends first, family councils, Saturday functions, inherited crowns.

For a hotel or restaurant the question is not whether the work is beautiful. It is whether a guest feels seen by it. These pieces carry a specific warmth, celebration, gold light, textile, ceremony, and they reward the second look a diner or a returning guest gives a wall.

This book sets out the collection by room, shows the work at true scale in hospitality settings, and closes with a specification page and three ways to work together: a rotating show, editions bought outright, or a site-specific commission.

All works are mixed media and AI-assisted digital compositions, art-directed and finished by hand. We say so plainly, up front, and every print is proofed at its final size before it ships.

Fola Adeleke is a Nigerian-British mixed media digital artist and designer raised in East London, whose work explores identity, culture, and emotional memory through layered contemporary visual storytelling. Influenced by the intersection of African heritage and urban life, his practice blends texture, symbolism, portraiture, and graphic composition to create works that feel both deeply personal and culturally expansive.

Alongside his artistic practice, Adeleke is the Lead Designer at Daily Paper, where his visual language has been shaped by fashion, architecture, music, and contemporary African creativity. Based between Amsterdam and London, his work carries a strong sense of rhythm, design sensitivity, and modern cultural dialogue.

Through mixed media and digital composition, Adeleke creates collectible works intended to bring presence, depth, and narrative into contemporary interiors. His pieces sit at the intersection of art, design, and cultural preservation, balancing refined aesthetics with emotional and symbolic resonance.

Adeleke's practice incorporates AI-assisted digital tools alongside traditional design and compositing techniques. Each piece is art-directed, composed, and refined by hand before release.

THREE WAYS IN

Start with a wall, not a contract.

LOWEST COMMITMENT

The rotating show

Six to eight works hung in your space for three to six months at no cost. Each piece carries a small card with a QR code to its edition page. You get a curated wall and a story for your guests; the studio gets a room. Works sold from the wall earn the venue a commission.

BUY OUTRIGHT

Editions, framed and delivered

Every work is an edition of fifteen on archival fine-art paper at A1, A2 or A3, signed and numbered with a certificate of authenticity. Trade pricing applies from three works. Framing, glazing and installation can be handled end to end.

SITE-SPECIFIC

Commission or licence

A mural-scale piece for a lobby, a suite of guest-room prints, or a work made for your rooms and your guests. Editions of fifteen stay collector editions; hospitality runs are made under a separate licence so the value of both is protected.
